LUXURY CONDO LIVING

ELITE ELEGANCE

EVANGELINE GOULETAS' DEVELOPMENT STYLE MIRRORS HER RICH LIFE

They say that one out of a million people are born with a star above their head.

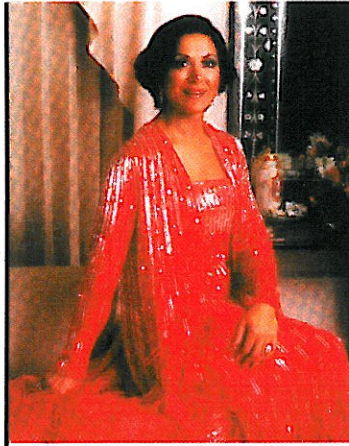

Meet Evangeline Gouletas, Chairman and CEO of Skyline Equities Realty and one of the nation's most prominent luxury condominium developers. She is one of these special individuals with star quality and hers is an impressive story.

"I have striven for excellence, in both my business and personal lives," comments Evangeline. "It takes a strong passion and determination, working day and night to build a business." Evangeline set a torrid pace for herself as a young adult. She earned a master's degree in mathematics, followed by graduate courses in mathematics from the Illinois Institute of Technology and John Hopkins University. She was then selected as one of the first women engineers to participate in the Minute Man Missile Program.

After that, she decided that her enthusiasm and passion for the real estate business was too strong to ignore and a new career was launched. Since 1971, she has been involved in the development of over 150 luxury high-rise condominium developments throughout 40 regional markets in the United States. She sustains this success by maintaining a disciplined balance, as did her Greek ancestors. The philosophy is centered on three key aspects of man: mind, body and soul; a personal code of conduct that defines Evangeline.

Away from the boardroom, she thrives on international travel, spends time on her yacht in the Bahamas, decorates her apartments in white-on-white and wears custom-designed gowns by the world's most celebrated designers. Instead of simple horseback riding, she competes in dressage and does so dressed in sartorial splendor. She skies the slopes of St. Moritz and Gstaad and plays tennis in the Hamptons.

She routinely dines with the international elite, has attended State dinners at the White House and has met every living President. She has been the guest of Malcolm Forbes on his yacht, David Rockefeller at his home on the Hudson River and the guest of the late Jackie Kennedy Onassis for a clambake at the Kennedy's Cape Cod residence. Last year she was the guest of Princess Elisabeth of Búdingen and Isenberg at her royal castle.

Evangeline takes inspiration from her travels and brings exposure to world-class buildings when developing condominium projects such as Skyline at Mary Brickell Village in Miami. "I am extremely proud to present the world as I know it," comments Evangeline. Reflective of the standards of the Evangeline Signature Luxury Condominium Collection, Skyline at Mary Brickell Village will be complete with a grand sense-of-arrival entrance; Mediterranean-style lobby; unprecedented common area amenities, including a 41,500 square-foot recreation/pool deck, high-level finishes and state-of-the-art technology.

A key element in her life, Evangeline acknowledges the balance with her spirituality which includes a sincere concern for those less fortunate. She is unfaltering in her support of many charities, including the U.S. Fund for UNICEF for which she sits on the Advisory Board.

Evangeline continues to contribute to several ministries and has endowed a national park in Nazareth, Israel. She is also a Grand Dame with the dignity of Commanduer with the historic Sovereign Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem.

This Easter, Evangeline embarked on a week-long stay in the quaint Greek island of Prokopi; a village of 300 people. While there, she took on the lifestyle of the villagers while attending nightly church services at St. John's of Russia Cathedral. "I embark on these spiritual 'retreats' to rejuvenate my mind and soul," she says. "It is an ideal break from the fast pace world I live in."

And as her inspiring story continues, Evangeline Gouletas will certainly advance with grace, style, substance, and compassion. ■
